Coping with Grief

00

The experience of bereavement following a suicide can be intense and overwhelming. There may be a wide range of feelings and thoughts which are difficult to understand and to manage.

• Exercise to use excess adrenaline

Prioritise daily tasks, do only what is essential

Use an answering machine, choose who you will talk to Write notes to relatives and friends when you need to tell aspects of your story, or to express feelings

- Keep a journal to record your thoughts and feelings, especially if you are unable to sleep
- Spend time with nature
- Review pictures and mementoes
- Visit the burial site or some other special place
- Rearrange and store the person's belongings
- Individual counselling or a support group
- Reading
- Writing
- Spiritual searching of self
- Gardening
- Find ways to honour the life of the person who has died.

it to

Here are some activities, which may be helpful.

- Find ways to look after yourself
- Spend time alone to think, remember, pray, meditate, mourn
- Talk to a trusted 'other' who will listen with understanding to your thoughts and feelings
- Develop a resource list, phone numbers of people and places to contact when the going gets tough
- Find distractions, to provide time out from the pain
- Collect information, read simple books about surviving suicide, or about life enhancement, when you are ready
- Use physical nurture, massage, spa baths, early nights, and get some fresh air by going for short walks
- Keep treasures, a memory box, journal, photo album
- Eat a healthy diet, frequent small amounts of nutritious, easily digested food
